Cardiac P.E.T. Scan

An imaging tool used to determine damage due to heart attack or incident. The P.E.T scan can also diagnose Coronary Artery Disease.

Nuclear Stress Test

Used to measure blood flow to your heart, the nuclear stress test is excellent at determining the cause of your chest pain.

Echocardiogram

This test uses sound waves to learn pertinent information about your heart that can be used to determine future treatment.

Carotid Ultrasound

Used specifically to check for blockages in the carotid arteries in the neck, this ultrasound shows potential for strokes in patients.

Vascular Ultrasound

This non-invasive test measures blood circulation in the extremities to check for possible blockages.

Electrocardiogram

Commonly used to diagnose a heart attack, this test uses small electrodes to record the electrical signals in your heart.
